3. Reason for revision

For the first half of the current fiscal year, consolidated net sales are expected to exceed the previously announced forecast, driven by anticipated robust demand in the electronics and semiconductor industries as well as the machinery industry, which is expected to boost sales of related tools.

In terms of profits, in addition to the increase in net sales, earnings are expected to improve due to higher factory utilization rates and the recognition of foreign exchange gains resulting from the weak yen, leading to results that are expected to exceed the previously announced forecast.

Note: The above forecasts are based on information currently available to the Company and certain assumptions that the Company believes are reasonable. Actual results may differ from these forecasts due to various factors.
